I heard that the NAB may be trying to limit what I listen to on my XM radio, a subscription based service that I chose to purchase as an alternative to the ruined FM format. Why do we have to put up with over 30 minutes of commercials per hour just to listen to music? The stations don't even play good music anymore, only brand new songs the record companies pay to have them play over and over and over and over so we consumers will want to go but it?. I don't think so. That's why I pay for my 100 channels - some blessedly free of commercials - because the free market has been overrun by corporate boardrooms, not good DJs. I pay to hear vulgar jokes on my cherished comedy channel, the same way cable subscribers may watch whatever crass comedy shows HBO deems suitable to produce. I want pay to hear instant weather and traffic, just as they offer on cable or satellite TV systems. Please leave my XM alone. Thank You,
